Laminates (multi-layer gloves)

A large number of chemical protective gloves employ combinations of materials in multiple layers. This frequently restricts mobility and is to the detriment of wearer comfort. Such gloves are frequently used under conditions of very high exposure (for example to mixtures of chemicals).